Admiral JELlicoe's "SWAN" PEN

...Hence, our race...
...in a less rude coarse attack...
...to love abuse; they prefer action to inaction.

A PRESENT FOR ADMIRAL JELlicoe.
"It will readily be understood that I could not forgo the pleasure of obtaining from Jellicoe and Sturdee their autographs on the menu card. Jellicoe signed his name with my Swan fountain pen, which he highly praised; and, indeed, it writes very smoothly and easily. Before taking leave I told the admiral that he would be affording me great joy if he would consent to accept this pen from me as a memento. So when I have occasion to read about the exploits of the Grand Fleet I shall imagine that the orders and reports of Admiral Jellicoe were signed with my pen. He will also use it in answering innumerable letters from all corners of the British Empire accompanying every possible description of parcel from adults and children for whom the admiral's name has long been a fetish."
After parting with the chief of staff, Vice-Admiral Madden, with the hospitable hosts, exchanging good-bye and compliments, we descended to the mess, which took up the south-east corner of the mess deck.

The above was written by M. NABOKOV a Russian Journalist who visited the British Fleet recently and is reproduced from The "Times" Russian Supplement.

have been at almost touch with his leadership many months of strain. It witnessed is quite unusually calm reactions as between the soldiers of an army and their own command.

This was in fact the first time he has ever
of the instances of that the "off" command senior officers and men. It exists in every part of the British Army, and, a trial of General, sympathy, and administration and it is certain in the Commanded gallantry of soldiers of all ranks thus suddenly and after long periods. These in fact have of the war, and it is not attached into its greatly solidly under the influence of mutual esteem. In the case of General Bird-wood and his men it is the rare link of the natural esteem of the soldiers. A trial of soldiers have upon an uncommon familiarity each with the work of the other.

It would be waste an effort to interpret and explain as it does. It is a fact, and a described, for it is the Anzacs who know but the surface of it and the qualities that build it. That it may perhaps be said that such General Birdwood is a soldier, a trial of his face in the Anzac Army is at least a link connected with his personal attitude. As his professional educational, if I know my fellow-countrymen, for his, his professional of it. It is in any case, General Birdwood with a career of distinction already behind him. But as anyone knows, who has sympathy, an understanding, and a of an officer there are Generals and Generals and on the personal side General Bird-wood is by way of being an exception.

But at first what was the root of his
of the immediately comprehensible man everyone know him to be. Still young enough in experience, young enough, indeed, as years as such is prepared to him by an ob-

BEHIND THE LINES.

IV.
LONDON, June 11.—I shall never forget both the lines, and the mighty and marvellous phenomenon covers many miles of France, and it is unknown in Britain. The British part begins somewhere in Whitehall, where tons press the machinery of it into motion. Thence it comes half across London and over the Channel, and step by step from the Channel it comes to the mouth of access to the British front. The British part of it alone is a whole world of glacial activity, a multitudinous traffic of that are of the war, and must be in the mammoth come-and-go of ship loads, loads, wagon loads, powered by steam times always successfully compelling the Belgians to retreat. The Belgians were in Belgium ended almost where we stood. There are many graves on the field, and the colour is waving everywhere in honour of the men who fell. The air is very still, while because of what this battle was, did little chance of liars there. In the middle of this plain, ruffled, a mere 100 yards from the front line, there is a mass of it masses of debris will probably be well known in time to come as a part of the many churches of France that have been destroyed during the war.

These miles of France which once were battle-ground are now, however, behind the lines, some of them far from the front. It is not to be taken with the same those vast array through town after to see their ruins. The ruins are not the same, they frame in and are part of the scene of procession that of tremendous traffic will be seen. Then as the traffic is seen, the vast background of war. The mass of men, the vast numbers of men, the vast numbers of motor traffic. Never was seen such a sight, a sprawl of motor vehicles. There is a vast number of motor vehicles, and it may be thousands in France on active service. Upon every road they are seen, in a vast number of motor vehicles, wheels, trailing clouds of dust. And behind them, the vast numbers of men, the vast numbers of motor traffic.

FACING THE COUNTRY.

WITH WHAT CRY?

MR. HOLMAN'S DILEMMA.

Deplorable as the position is, it would be inevitable that New South Wales would be dragged into a bitter electrocussing war before the present year closes. The Premier of the Commonwealth is in a very awkward position from personal contact with the Government of the United States. The dreadful carnage which is now being wrought in Europe with human blood; the lurid word pictures of the war, and the use in burning words how Germany has done all things else should go by the board.

Politicians are beating the air, while the rights of women to share in the establishment of a State coalition, or the claims of the workers to compensation for injuries received. Compensation for injuries received, forsooth, while daily we are told the lists of hundreds of our citizens who are killed in action, and thousands who are injured in the service of their country and world-wide democracy of civilisation. And they want with a cheer, thinking only of their labours, or compensation.

tion of their hearths and homes, and the

of Australia. The situation is a picture of the splendid isolation of Australia's manhood, demonstrated on several occasions by the far-fung battle line.

Mr. Holman must accept the responsibility for all this. He has several times promised willingness to do so, yet as the years pass he must render an account of his leadership approaches, his dilemma leaving him was the opportunity two years ago to step it all. The great call had come, and Mr. Holman was at hand to realize the dream when none would be for party, but for the State. Yet he was dithered between scorn or with deliberation, it must be said. It turned his back on the chance, and he must accept the responsibility for having been the chief factor in the achievement of Australia's unbroken record of constant sacrifice throughout practically the whole of the war.

State to inquire into the charges of official corruption. The State Party believed a record session of eight consecutive days was necessary to give the continuous sitting - not to deal with the issue, but to push ahead with party business. The State Party will take New South Wales, a long and arduous task, to blot out the stigma. One thinks of the words of the late Sir John Gorton, M.L.A., the first of Mr. Hume's party to volunteer for active service in the cause of the party, "I will do it, and I will urge everybody to shut down all other duties, and think only of the war." The party was deep out of pathos in the matter, when he said that should any man happen to him his two sons should be named after him. He should be named after the glory of Britain's splendid freedom, and the glory of the Union Jack. The party press the contrast, but it is not the hearts and minds of the vast majority of men and women of this State. This country awaits the opportunity

It has provided Mr. Holman with a convenient supply of ammunition for his attack on the Government programme. It is a pity that every body well known that the greater part of the Government programme consisted of measures which would have been introduced in Parliament, but for the disruption of the Parliament by the Labour League. So much was said at the last P.L.L. Conference about the activity of the Holman Government that it is well known, the Premier had to be brought down to his masters and admit the defeat of the P.L.L. executive, not only to the P.L.L. but to the public. It is not possible to state general lines of legislation, but to insist upon particular measures being introduced. "We gave you the majority," P.L.L. said, "and we expect you to use it."

THE SOMME.

ATTACKS REPULSED.

SALONICA.

BULGARIAN ADVANCE.

ROUMANIA'S POSITION.

There have been no new developments on the Somme. Enemy attacks have been repulsed.

There is activity along the whole of the Salonica front, where the Bulgarians are attacking from three directions. They are reported within two miles of Kavala. The Allies are standing firm on their line. The British have repulsed attacks, and the Serbians, further west, have severely defeated the invaders.

Beyond activity on the Stokhod, and the seizure of some positions in the Carpathians, the Russians report no changes of importance.

There is much speculation as to the intentions of Roumania, and German newspapers suggest that her intervention on the side of the Allies is imminent.

THE BRITISH FRONT.

HEAVY BOMBARDMENTS.

LONDON, Aug. 23. General Sir Douglas Haig, in his report of Monday, says that the British forces on the Somme have repulsed attacks on the early morning at High Wood and to the north-west of High Wood. Some of our covering parties withdrew before a strong enemy, who made no progress under our fire.

The enemy bombarded us at Pozieres and near the Somme. The British forces on the Somme have repulsed attacks on the early morning at High Wood and to the north-west of High Wood. Some of our covering parties withdrew before a strong enemy, who made no progress under our fire.

Enemy raids north-east of Heliopolis, and east of the Flamborough, a company of British troops was driven back with loss. They only succeeded in reaching our line at one point, and were quickly driven back.

North of Giverny we made a gas attack on the enemy in two places. Reporting on Monday Sir Douglas Haig states: "The enemy's attack on a small scale near Heliopolis was repulsed. Our artillery severely damaged the enemy's positions, and the British forces on the Somme have repulsed attacks on the early morning at High Wood and to the north-west of High Wood. Some of our covering parties withdrew before a strong enemy, who made no progress under our fire."

Our aeroplanes continue to bomb the enemy's positions. A British machine on Sunday did not return. Hostile aeroplanes were seen over our lines.

FRENCH FRONT. A French communiqué states: We captured seven guns in the wood between Maurepas and Guillemont.

A French communiqué issued on Monday night states: We bombarded German positions north and south of the Somme. Our aeroplanes severely damaged the enemy's positions, and the British forces on the Somme have repulsed attacks on the early morning at High Wood and to the north-west of High Wood. Some of our covering parties withdrew before a strong enemy, who made no progress under our fire."

THE ENEMY COMMANDER. The Paris "Temps" states that General von Mackensen commands 1,500,000 men on the Somme front.

GERMAN WOUNDED. American reports say that there has been a considerable increase in the number of German wounded passing through Belgium. Five thousand have passed during the past few days.

GERMAN REPORT. A German communiqué, issued on Monday, states: We repulsed desultory attacks west of High Wood, also grenade attacks at Maurepas, and infantry attacks from Ouliers and Pozieres. We destroyed an English hydroplane near Ostend.

THE AUSTRALIANS. Their greatest battle.

Captain C. E. W. Bean, official press correspondent with the Australian forces, calling from British Headquarters in France on August 19, says: "After a couple of days' lull, fierce fighting broke out again on all sides on the Puy de la Fère ridge. The New South Wales men managed to seize portions of the enemy line near Mouquet Farm, but were unable to keep them. Great advances were made in one portion of our line where the troops held despite heavy losses. The British, in a battle in which they had to make charge after charge, advanced part of their line considerably."

It is quite impossible to tell the full story of this magnificent struggle at present. Much of the wonderful and stirring work that is done every day is not yet known. But when the Australians can hear, in full, the story of the greatest battle they ever fought, they will glow with pride in their countrymen. The men do not want to be called heroes. Indeed, they rather dread it. They are just Australians, doing their work as the war demands.

GERMAN TREACHERY.

THE ANZACS' EXPERIENCES.

The correspondent of the "Morning Post" at British headquarters says the Anzacs describe a new device of German treachery, called a "torpedo," as a "creaky-looking thing with four legs." It is left lying on the parapet or trench or other landing place, when the Germans run. It is really a high-explosive bomb, which bursts on the slightest touch. The first met with caused a number of casualties in the darkness, but the men soon learned to deal successfully with it, as they deal with other German tricks. It is noteworthy that little has been seen lately of liquid fire squads.

The Anzacs declare that the Turk is a gentleman in comparison with the "Boche." "The Turk fights fairly and bravely," the Germans are said, "and a young Australian 'flew' them like a hawk. The Turk is a devil at close quarters, but not so the Germans. The moment they see the bayonet they drop on their knees and squeal like rats."

VERDUN AND SOMME. A comparison.

AMERICAN PAPER'S THEORY. A New York message says that an editorial in the "New York Times" offers a new reason for the attack on Verdun by the Germans. "Verdun," it says, "opens a side door on the German fortress of Metz. It lies due east of the front door, opened down the Moselle through Pont-a-Mousson, where plain French guns have been hammering the Germans since the beginning of the offensive, the paper says that the Germans at Verdun, after five months, occupied 120 square miles, pierced a 12-mile front to a depth of five miles, and captured two out of 19 positions at a cost of half a million men. On the Somme, the Allies, in seven weeks, have captured 70 square miles, have pierced a 24-mile front to a depth of eight miles, and now threaten the most vital bases on the Western front. Their loss has been much smaller."

"General Sarraill," says the paper, "reconstructed Verdun into the greatest fortress in the world, with a killing capacity of 700,000 men. When the Germans entered, the French sprung the trap, which worked well. The side door to Metz is still open, and the offensive on the Somme goes on."

BEHIND ENEMY LINES. WHAT A FRENCHMAN SAW. The Paris correspondent of the "New York Times" says that one of the most remarkable stories of the war is that of a French corporal. He participated in a successful charge with his regiment, and was killed by an explosion. He was stripped of his uniform. He recovered, and took the uniform of a dead Italian, and determined to join the enemy and seek information. He came upon an outpost cooking at the entrance to a dugout.

"They greeted me with amazement," said the corporal, "but I thought that I was attached, had been annihilated. They were men of a newly-arrived Silesian regiment from Verdun, and they had suffered 40 casualties while waiting in the rear. Their food, despite the reports, was good, consisting of sausage and vegetable soup, but their morale was utterly different to ours."

"All were utterly sick of the war. They complained bitterly of bad news from home. They said that the French artillery was disgustingly barbarous. One declared that he would be quite willing for the Allies to take the offensive, as the Germans were now in a position to drive the Allies into the sea, and that it was only a matter of days before the time would be propitious. The demoralization caused by the delay was much aggravated lately by the Allies increasing activity. The present Bulgarian movement may be regarded as a desperate effort to terminate intolerable suffering."

ENEMY REPORT. A German communiqué says: "We gained places south and east of Verdun. The German offensive should be taken seriously. It is generally conceded that it has a political rather than a strategic object, and is designed to impress the German electorate now electing a Parliament with the danger of sliding with the Entente."

A report from Salonica says that, though various shows are taken of the Bulgarians' object, the opinion is widely held that the leaders hope to restore the dropping momentum of the army, which was depressed by inaction and privations. The Bulgarian soldiers have been repeatedly deceived since December by assurances of German aid. The German has ordered the Greek troops in Macedonia to retire beyond the zone as the Bulgarians advance.

It is reported in Athens that the Greek commander at Fort Theopetra, south of Hupel, and north of Demirhisar, refused to surrender the fort, and a conflict ensued. There are no details.

REASONS FOR OFFENSIVE. The "Morning Post" Athens correspondent says it is impossible to state whether the Bulgarian offensive should be taken seriously. It is generally conceded that it has a political rather than a strategic object, and is designed to impress the German electorate now electing a Parliament with the danger of sliding with the Entente.

A report from Salonica says that, though various shows are taken of the Bulgarians' object, the opinion is widely held that the leaders hope to restore the dropping momentum of the army, which was depressed by inaction and privations. SALONICA BATTLE.

THE BULGAR ATTACK.

AT THREE POINTS. SERBIANS WIN A VICTORY. LONDON, Aug. 22. An Athens message states: It appears the Bulgarians took the offensive at three points. A force occupying Rupel advanced on Demir Hisar, another advanced on Florina, and a third crossed the Moselle and advancing by the Stroumitza Plains towards Kavala.

Advances from Salonica state that the invaders are two miles from Kavala. The population is taking refuge in the island of Thassos, which lies just off the coast. Thursday's battle on the Moselle, which was a slight triumph for the Serbians. The Bulgarians lost a thousand out of six thousand.

The new Serbian artillery inflicted severe losses on the Bulgarians during the Rupel retreat on Florina. A squadron of Bulgarian cavalry was charged a Serbian battery was completely destroyed by the Serbian infantry escort.

A Paris message says it is estimated that the Bulgarians, Austrians, Germans, and Turks in Macedonia number from 600,000 to 700,000. They have been benefited by German training, and are well equipped with artillery.

BRITISH ACTIVITIES. The Bulgarians attempted to recapture the new British positions on Horiopolis Hill, south-west of Lake Doiran, on Saturday. They were easily repulsed. A Serbian aeroplane successfully bombed a column of Bulgarians east of Kavala.

The British and French have sent columns to the east of the Struma, where there have been many encounters with the Bulgarians between Kavala and Kaskal Juna.

FRENCH PROGRESS. A French communiqué states: Our operations are making progress along the whole of our Italian front.

BULGARS AND GREEKS. The Bulgarian and German Ministers have handed the Greek Government a written declaration, guaranteeing the rights and liberties of the population in Greek territory occupied by the advancing troops, and guaranteeing that the territory will be restored after the war.

The Government has ordered the Greek troops in Macedonia to retire beyond the zone as the Bulgarians advance. It is reported in Athens that the Greek commander at Fort Theopetra, south of Hupel, and north of Demirhisar, refused to surrender the fort, and a conflict ensued. There are no details.

EAST FRONT.

RUSSIAN PROGRESS.

ALONG THE STOKHOD. LONDON, Aug. 21. A Russian communiqué states: Fighting continues on the Stokhod, in the region of Tobolsk. We further advanced at some points. Our captures here on August 18 and 19 totalled 1,500 prisoners, and 18 machine guns.

Our advance guards are successfully advancing westward of Nadezhda (south of Stanislav), capturing a series of heights. We occupied Pereskul and Jablonitsa in the Carpathians, also several heights westward of Pereskul.

NEW GERMAN LIQUID. The "Morning Post's" Petrograd correspondent says the Germans at Krevu used a liquid which produces a burning sensation. It is not liquid fire. A soldier struck on the arm is disabled immediately, but dies on the third or fourth day. The concoction produces blood-clotting.

ENEMY REPORTS. A German communiqué states: We repulsed strong Russian attempts to extend their positions on the west bank of the Stokhod. We took Stepanski, a height in the Carpathians. While storming Krevu Heights on the 19th we captured 100 prisoners and five machine guns.

BATTLES IN ASIA. STUBBORN FIGHTING. RUSSIANS AND TURKS. LONDON, Aug. 21. A Russian communiqué states: Our fire repulsed stubborn attacks on the heights south-west of Tonnankai mountain. The fighting is developing in our favour in the direction of Diarbekir. We captured a fortified series of heights and many Turks.

A Turkish communiqué states: Enemy aviators, on the 15th, unsuccessfully bombed our Tigris positions. We successfully bombed enemy camps and bridges. The situation in Mesopotamia is unchanged.

The Russians have been driven towards the frontier, east of Revanduz between Mosul and Lake Urmia. Further east, in Persia, we compelled them to further retreat southwards. We captured the Karaman Mountains (28 kilometers north-east of Mush).

THE ITALIANS. ATTACKS REPULSED. CONSOLIDATING GAINS. LONDON, Aug. 21. An Italian communiqué states: Enemy batteries were active in the Trentino. We shelled Drave Valley, disturbing train movements. Small enemy attacks in the Astico and Piave areas were repulsed. We captured 20 prisoners.

We are consolidating our gains at Gorizia and the Carso. The strong Italian offensive in the direction of Gorizia and the Piave bridges must be done without delay.

KING IN GORIZIA. A report from Milan states that King Emmanuel of Italy visited Gorizia and walked through the streets. He had an enthusiastic reception.

LORD ROBERTS. HIS WARNING JUSTIFIED. TRIBUTE TO HIS MEMORY. LONDON, Aug. 21. Thirty thousand people witnessed the Countess Roberts unveiling an equestrian statue of her father in Glasgow today.

Lord Derby (Under-Secretary for War) delivered a eulogium upon the life of Lord Roberts. He said they could not overlook the fact that Lord Roberts, who for years had urged them to prepare for the situation they faced in August, 1914, had been treated with scorn by many who should have known better. He prophesied the lesson they were now learning, which it had been repeated over and over again, that the British people had to learn to respect the gallant old soldier who had been with them from the beginning of the war.

GERMAN SUSPICIOUS. A message from Copenhagen says that the "Krona Zeitung," a leading Conservative paper of Berlin, states that the Roumanian Minister for War and the Russian military attaché at Bucharest participated in certain negotiations yesterday. This must be considered as proof that Roumania has joined the Entente. It is supposed that Roumanian troops, were discussed. Germany must regard the arrangement as a casus belli.

A New York report says that the Berlin correspondent of the "New York American" states that it is believed that Roumania is preparing an ultimatum for Austria and Germany.

PORTUGAL'S HELP. A German communiqué states: Near Fleury we shot down grenades.

GERMAN PEACE TALK. "NOTHING OFFICIAL." LONDON, Aug. 21. Mr. Asquith, replying in the House of Commons to a question as to whether the German Government had often declared its readiness to enter into peace negotiations, and whether the Entente would accept the German peace terms, said that Germany had shown no disposition to see for peace, except on terms which would be humiliating to some of the Allies.

It was not true, he said, that Britain had exercised pressure, and added: "Beyond the newspapers' statements Germany has not submitted anything official."

FILMING THE CABINET. WIDESPREAD PROTESTS. LONDON, Aug. 21. The London "Daily Chronicle's" Parliamentary correspondent says the proposal to cinematograph a Cabinet sitting to-morrow, ostensibly to aid war charities, has been postponed. Owing to widespread protests it will probably be abandoned.

MUCH can be said in favour of filming the members of the Cabinet for historic purposes, but it is feared such pictures would vulgarise the Cabinet if shown on the screen. The programme with cowboys and buffoons. The question will be raised in the House of Commons on Tuesday.

GERMAN PRISONERS. The latest returns show that 25,142 able-bodied Germans, now in England and France, have been made prisoners by the British.

HIGH "CANAL" FLEET.

HOW IT RAN.

BRITISH LOSE THEIR PREY. WHAT DUTCH SKIPPERS SAW. The Rotterdam correspondent of the "Daily Telegraph" says that the German High Seas fleet has won another "great victory," perhaps even greater than that of Jutland—because it completely succeeded in avoiding an encounter with the British forces.

But it cannot claim another victory, because scores of Dutch skippers saw what happened. These trained sailors witnessed all the movements of the German squadron. These reports prove conclusively that there is only one fact of importance—namely, that on the first news of the British fleet's appearance the Germans turned tail and went home at full speed.

The Dutch skippers say that they sighted the German fleet, at least 60 vessels of all descriptions, at 9 o'clock in the morning. The fleet was guided carefully by three Zeppelins. They saw the same fleet at 6 o'clock in the evening, with attendant aircraft, steaming furiously eastwards. What had happened in the meantime was clear from the reports of other Dutch captains. The latter saw a lone British squadron at 2 in the morning, but much farther south than the Germans. At 6 o'clock the position was that the British were then heading north towards the enemy. The Dutch also saw three Zeppelins coming from the north. These, after they discerned the British fleet, immediately returned towards the Germans. Half an hour later, the "High Canal Fleet" was making good progress towards its base.

No more was heard of the German warships in the North Sea, but the Dutch saw the British squadrons scouring the seas for many hours afterwards.

The search was continued after dark. No possible chance of bringing the enemy to battle was missed, but the German Emperor's admirals were equally determined to miss no opportunity of avoiding an action.

The testimony of the actual course of events is ample and conclusive, because many of the Dutch trawlers, which were in the North Sea on Saturday, have now returned to Ymuiden.

ENEMY ADMISSION. A German communiqué admits that a submarine was rammed, after destroying a small British cruiser. The submarine reached port safely. Whether any submarine was sunk cannot be ascertained until all submarine reports have been received.

CRUISER NOTTINGHAM. DETAILS OF CASUALTIES. LONDON, Aug. 21. The casualties on the light cruiser Nottingham, which was sunk by a submarine in the North Sea while searching for the German fleet, were: Two dead, 33 missing, and six wounded.

SERIOUS EXPLOSION. MUNITION WORKS. LOSS OF LIFE REPORTED. LONDON, Aug. 21. It is officially stated that an explosion occurred in a munitions factory in York-shire this afternoon.

The fatalities are serious, and assistance from neighbouring towns has been sent.

ZEPPELIN VOYAGES. CORRESPONDENT'S DESCRIPTION. NEW YORK, Aug. 22. The Berlin correspondent of the "New York Times" says that Anton Fendrick's forthcoming book will narrate a visit to a German air-cruiser fleet somewhere in the sand dunes. There he saw, housed, a giant airship, which would turn on its axis by touching a single lever, thus making it face the wind.

"Slowly a gap widened in the wall, like the shifting curtain of a theatre, and then the monster moved from its stall, and came out. Hundreds of Germans held the ropes, and the Zeppelin slowly rose. The noise of the motors was deafening. From the gondola I looked downwards on a portion of the North Sea, and saw battleships, which appeared to be floating in the clouds. At a height of 3,000 feet, we blew off gas, the commander explaining that there was a danger of a spontaneous explosion."

"We returned, however, and practised dropping bombs on a target, which was a huge white cross in the midst of a plain. All the bombs fell near."

"After the Zeppelin alighted, I interviewed officers who had taken part in English raids. They said the returning crews were frequently so frozen that it was necessary to chop off ice from their clothes before they could undress. The newer Zeppelins are all fitted with enclosed gondolas."

ADVANCE ON KAVALA. Although there is little official news of the progress of events in Macedonia, there are several references to the Bulgarian advance on Kavala. This is the Greek section of the Stroumitza River, across which the Bulgarians are said to have advanced. At the foot of the mountains, and on the northern shore of the Gulf of Kavala, the Bulgarians are said to have advanced. The enemy, in all probability, followed this road, and came to the village of Stroumitza, 21 miles west of the Gulf of Kavala. It is not yet known what object the enemy has in view here. It may be that he intends to hold out a threat of a flank attack on the Allies, but the Stroumitza River appears to offer effective protection on the right of the Allied forces operating near Lake Doiran.
